

MANCHESTER AND VICINITY.

Briefs.—The flag and cinders from the Tredgore Iron-Works which have been sent to the City Engineer in forming the road-bed of many cross streets, and the cinders of the same, have answered an admirable purpose, and enabled many a citizen residing in the localities named to get to or from their residences to the main avenues, when, during this weather at least, people otherwise would have nearly been imprisoned on their own premises.

Old inhabitants predict a big rise in the James river in the near future. Their belief to this effect is based on the idea that recent exceeding moist weather hereabout has been general in the State, and that the snow in the mountains has melted as a consequence of the same.

A colored statesman named Jim Walker, who recently left a bag of boots with a Chesterfield colored brother for safe-keeping, has been traced to Old street, Petersburg, and there arrested on the charge of stealing said boots from a car on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad at Richmond. After an examination before the Mayor of Petersburg he will be taken to the scene of his alleged delinquency for trial. Walker is a native of the Middlesex district, Chesterfield county, and has for years been noted for his light-saggered performances.

Last week the High school, as well as the others of lesser grades, showed a fine percentage of scholars on the honor roll. The public schools here are well and efficiently conducted, at least in Manchester. C. G. Adkinson, Esq., one of our most useful citizens, is now in New York city on business.

W. L. Fernald, the Danville internal-revenue collector, who is now said to be demoted, once resided in this city, where he was a Federal official, he was a director in the Manchester National Bank. Carl Summers, the well-known professor of music, having married a lady of this city, has announced his intention to settle here permanently.

Edwin T. Pilkinton, who died in Richmond this week, was a brother of the late Mrs. James M. Perdue, and was a former resident of Manchester.

Reports lately from Rome, where the Rev. J. H. Eager, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, is now engaged in missionary work, are to the effect that the City Church will commence its January term Monday the 8th instant, which is also the sixty-eighth anniversary of the battle of New Orleans. One old Chesterfield, Isaac Briggs by name, participated in that battle.

Rev. A. Bings, Jr., of the colored Baptist church, was very pleasantly remembered at Christmas by members of his flock in the shape of acceptable presents of all sorts of creature comforts.

All the city churches will have their regular services to-day.

A Sad Chapter.

KILLED HIMSELF ACCIDENTALLY—SUDDEN DEATH OF A LADY WHILE COMING HER HAIR—BROKE HIS COLLAR-BONE.

(Charlotte (N.C.) Observer.)

A series of incidents occurred on the line of the Carolina Central railroad, last Wednesday—some of them of a most startling nature. A lady, while coming to her hair, a lady dropping dead while coming her hair, and a boy falling and breaking his collar-bone.

Mr. George Elmore, a section-master of the Carolina Central road, was superintending some work on the line near Hamlet, and while stooping down to pull out a cross-tie, a pistol which he carried in his inside coat-pocket dropped out, and the hammer striking the iron rail exploded the weapon. The bullet entered Mr. Elmore's throat and came out behind his ear, inflicting a wound which resulted in death about fifteen minutes afterwards. Mr. Elmore was a clever man, popular and respected by all of his associates, and his sad ending is greatly deplored by his many friends.

Last Wednesday morning Mr. Farmer, a carpenter, who works at the Carolina Central shops at Laurinburg, left home for his work as usual, and on returning at dinner-time found his wife sitting in a chair with her hair down and a comb in it. He thought she was asleep, and shook her, when the startling truth that she was dead was revealed to him. She was in perfect good health when he left her in the forenoon. Her death was caused by heart-disease. Her body was carried to Wilmington for interment on the same train with that of Mr. Elmore, the deceased section-master.

On the same day that the above deaths occurred little Willie Gill, a ten-year-old son of Mr. Wash Gill, who was formerly master mechanic of the Carolina Central road, but now works for the Yorkville Gill & Co., met with a painful accident on the streets of Laurinburg. The little fellow stumbled and fell to the ground with such force as to break his collar-bone. The injury is painful but not serious.

The Man That is to Stand Up Against Sullivan.

Mr. Shide, of New Zealand, brought to California from Australia by Jim Mace, on his way to New York to make a match to fight the champion, John L. Sullivan. Shide is a man of fine physique, he stands six feet two inches and a half in his bare feet, with enormous shoulders and a depth of chest perfectly astounding. His arms are immense, wrists small; large, powerful hands, with enormous knuckles. His appearance is one calculated to awe and astonish a man of ordinary size. The California Examiner says that Jim Mace beside Shide looked quite small, and Patsy Hogan appeared a mere infant. Shide's legs are perfectly formed, and his feet and ankles are small. Every move he makes is graceful, his carriage dignified and manly. Mace said "that Shide is a half-bred Maori, and the hardest hitter I ever saw in my life; that he has licked every man that ever crossed him, and that he has knocked back for a second blow when he got his first home. He can stand punishment, too, for I have tapped him once or twice and he never winced. He is a wonderful wrestler, too," continued Mace. "He threw Professor Miller on his back, and I saw him, and you know that Miller is no slouch. He can out jump any man of his size, and is as active as a cat." "Did he ever fight in the ring?" Mace was asked. "No," replied Mace, "there was never a man where he comes from that would dare face him. But he knows much about the ring as I have had him in training for nearly a year. He was a natural fighter when I took hold of him, and he soon learned all the tricks. The best thing about him is his perfect good nature."

Want to be Divorced from Mrs. Langtry.

Mr. J. H. Langtry, a well-known business man of Boston, went to Europe last November, and returning, arrived in New York on the 28th ultimo. The gentleman whose name appears in the title of this article, caused much speculation as to his relationship with Mrs. Langtry and his possible business in this country. He is annoyed at the extensive use of his name in the newspapers, and says he wants to be set right. In an interview he says: "I have never known the woman in question, except in business advertisements, but use it now as much as you like if you'll get me divorced from the Jersey Lily."

Four Lives Saved.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup relieved four of my children of a most alarming attack of whooping-cough, from which their throats and necks became so swollen as to prevent them from swallowing. Nothing would give them even temporary relief until I used your Syrup. One bottle in one night saved their lives. I verily believe. G. W. E. Adams, Jr., Captain of Police, Baltimore, Md.

Only a Typographical Error.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Your correspondent "J. H. D.," whose kindly I apprehend, is correct in designating the second of the Byrds, the third of the name, the credit, according to Washington, of being the first to point out the best central spot, near to the present (not forest) spot, as a site for the seat of the National Government. I am informed of all that "J. H. D." has communicated, and I wrote last week your Byrd, "made me say second, as well as forest instead of present. Faithfully yours, R. A. Brock."

[Now, in view of the serious character of the mistakes alluded to in this controversy between the official secretary of the Virginia Historical Society and the lynx-eyed J. H. D., and since the burden of error has settled down upon this office in some one of its departments, we may be pardoned for taking a third hand in its consideration. The office of having ascribed to "Colonel William Byrd, the second of the name," the credit which was due to "Colonel William Byrd, the third of the name," is truly an irreparable error, and one which all true patriots and lovers of America will deplore. But it is questionable whether or not the veritable Colonel William Byrd, the second of his name, would could he now speak for himself, consider it an honor to his memory to be credited with having first pointed out the Federal capital. Further, the interest of the nation in quest of truth, to the contrary notwithstanding, it may not be beyond the bounds of speculation that the third Byrd of his name, could he have a say in the matter, would thank the writer or printer for having ascribed this act to the "second of his name." Be these hypotheses as they may, we merely wish to disclaim all part or participation in the errors which by the two preceding articles appear to be fastened upon us. We have his original copy to show that R. A. B. wrote "the second of his name," and also "near to the forest spot,"—near "the forest spot" than "the present spot." And furthermore the copy shows that, to give the "devil" his due, he cannot be credited with a single typographical error even for the sake of becoming a seapoint, though he is generally represented with horns.

We are meek and humble of heart, yet we cannot, to shield others, appear to be guilty of so great an error upon a national question as has been pointed out by J. H. D.]

Dramatic Notes.

The Langtry "boom of beauty" has spent its force. The engagement in Brooklyn was neither a social, artistic, nor financial success. But the Beauty had Talmage's circus as an opposition all the week.

The notoriety which Freddy Gebhardt has attained is very amusing to those who know him. He is a very young man—and very foolish. Some men have notoriety thrust on them. Others, as the reports, it is needless to say, are exaggerated. The trouble with Freddy is this, he is really smart with the lady. This is a positive fact. And will marry her? That may possibly be the future design—of the lady.

Mrs. Modjeska is a Tiff. Just before the curtain rose on the night of the 28th ultimo on the fourth act of "Frou-Frou" at Booth's Theatre that portion of the public sitting near the orchestra could hear the actress in loud and angry tones. She declared that it was "shameful and scandalous," and vowed she would not act in the same circumstances again. When the curtain rose the cause of the lady's anger was apparent. The scene of the fourth act, "shameful," it is needless to say, had been so arranged that the actress had to appear in a scene which showed her disgust with the only anecdote of the evening—Music and Drama.

Reception to Signor Salvini.

A public reception was given to Signor Salvini, the distinguished tragedian, at the Hotel Vendome, in Boston, Thursday afternoon. Upward of a thousand invitations were issued by the committee. The actor was presented with an address of welcome, which also contained expressions of regret that he was unable to accept of the present which was his final visit to America. Salvini, in reply, said that he was both proud and delighted to know that he had so large a number of friends on this side of the Atlantic, and that he should carry with him into his return to his native land the memory of a very cordial and appreciative manner in which he had been received by the American people.

Fashion's Fancies.

Cock-leather fans painted by hand are novelties.

A gentleman's cravat of terra-cotta satin, striped with gold, and a semi-pink to complete it, is worn by ladies with double-breasted Prince Albert frock-coats of olive green cloth or velvet.

Mastic gray cloth palatots are fashionable for children. They are semi-dresses, and are long enough to cover the child's dress. They are braided in rings of kurtz sleeves, and have a wide collar of brown plush. A mastic beaver hat of the great cart-wheel shape is worn with this cloak, trimmed with brown plush drapery.

Serpent green with golden lines is one of the colors most fashionable for velvet or plush suits, and a slight glint of terra-cotta enhances its beauty. Black Spanish lace, with thickly-corded designs, is the rich trimmings for the two odd shades mentioned.

The chasseur hat of green or brown felt, with a high, sloping crown and long cock-plumes, is a favorite pocket hat for young ladies, who wear it pushed back from the brow to show all the front hair.

The favorite visits has square, close sleeves and two thick box-pleats with long fronts, tied by ribbons to form a tassel near the foot. Brandenburghs across the front and in the back are the trimmings.

Kid bonnets in their natural color are worn by elegantly-dressed women. The crown is entirely of the leather, in its warm brown tint, moulded into shape in the way felt bonnets are, and the brim is covered with elaborate folds of velvet, either olive, dark green, garnet, or sea brown, to which is added some of the new leather lace of leaf and flower pattern, or else there is a cord of leather, or some gold cord, braid, or lace. The short strings are made of the blue velvet, and the folds. The kid grips, laces, and galleons introduced early in the season are very stylish trimming for felt and velvet bonnets.

An obscure but yet not wholly unintelligible joke in regard to the mule is that "though he cares very little for precious stones in general, yet he occasionally takes a man in the line of the mule. There's that riddle,"—Richmond Dispatch.

So might anybody who has ever travelled on "the raging canal." The man who got out of such an atrocious joke on the mule would himself be condemned to hard labor on the tow-path. —Charlottesville Chronicle.
